Fifty Feet of Rainfall Annually.

There is always more or less guess-work concerning the amount of rain that falls during any storm period. Throughout the United States the amount that falls on any one day rarely exceeds one inch. There are certain portions of the globe, however, that are frequently, and others only occasionally, deluged with water. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, at an altitude of 4,500 feet, 610 inches of rainfall have been registered in a single year, of which amount 187 inches (15 feet 3 inches) fell in the month of June. At a meteorological station in latitude 18 degrees, near the western boundary of Hindustan, the average rainfall for the 15 years ending with 1893 was 354 inches. In the northwestern part of England, at an altitude of 1,300 feet, the average annual rainfall is 146 inches, 111 inches in excess of the mean for St. Louis, which is but 37 inches and a fraction.

The wonderful record given above is still more phenomenal when we consider the fact that all the moisture the atmosphere is capable of holding at any one time would cover the entire surface of the globe to a depth of less than four inches should it all be instantly precipitated.—St. Louis Republic.

To Enrich Wood.

To enrich wood soak it for two days in warm alum water. If the article happens to be a table or something quite as large, smooth and clean it carefully, then with a brush apply the hot alum water as often as possible for two days. Then boil a handful of logwood chips in a quart of water until it measures only a pint. Put in this a piece of indigo as big as a bean and apply the liquid hot, using a brush. This will make the wood a violet color. Apply this three times, waiting each time for it to dry. Boil a little verdigris in some vinegar and give a coat of that. Let the wood stand three days, then polish well with a chamotte skin and varnish.—New York Telegram.

The Judge Was Deeply Moved.

"There was a good joke played on Judge Dundy of the United States Court at Omaha several years ago. It makes me laugh every time I see the judge's name in print," said Thomas A. Weaver, a judge who had been a prisoner in the Dundy case. "The man was sent to prison. This was a fellow on trial for passing counterfeit money. He was a single man, and the case against him was quite strong. Judge Baldwin was defending him, and seeing that the case was hopeless Baldwin decided to take advantage of Judge Dundy's weakness. He hunted up an old lady who had five children ranging from 8 years to 8 months old and had them impersonate the supposed wife and children of the prisoner. All through the trial they sat, often weeping, and the judge was brought up to be sentenced, the woman and children were brought in, and Judge Baldwin, who is very dramatic, made a plea for the man and his family of little ones, who would suffer if the father was sent to prison. Baldwin wept, the court wept, the prisoner pretended to weep, as did the woman and the children. When the court had wiped away the tears, he talked severely to the man and then gave him only one day in jail and $10 fine. Later on, when he learned how he had been deceived, he became so angry that it was weeks before he would speak to Judge Baldwin. When the joke got out, every one twitted the court. After that the sight of a kidder-chief applied to the eyes in Judge Dundy's court was liable to get the prisoner 10 years."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Baltimore's Canton Flannel Club.

The Canton Flannel Club of Baltimore has just closed its first season with the fine record of making 104 pieces of cotton to send under cover and the collection and distribution of 170 pieces more. It has a working membership of only 10 young women, and its meetings were weekly. One case of necessity which it relieved was that of a 3-year-old baby found in the gutter and under cover of the club's help. The baby was sent to prison. The body of another little baby was found to be sore and raw from the course, dried cloth in which it was wrapped. Much of its work was done for needy children, and one can guess the beneficence which the soft, fleecy fabric of the club has brought to these tender little bodies. This club might be copied in many parts and places another year.—Baltimore Correspondent.

Why They Laughed.

The English composer, the late George Osbourne, was the author of a brilliant salon piece called "La Pluie de Perles." It was at one time so popular in England that "everybody" played it. At a certain concert when the piece was being played in newspaper as its only clothing, and the body of another little baby was found to be sore and raw from the course, dried cloth in which it was wrapped. Much of its work was done for needy children, and one can guess the beneficence which the soft, fleecy fabric of the club has brought to these tender little bodies. This club might be copied in many parts and places another year.—Baltimore Correspondent.
